STORY OF THE PLAY

There's more action in the emergency room of County Community General Hospital than any nurse-turned-writer could ever imagine. Unfortunately Nurse Betty doesn't live to see it. She's bumped off because somebody at County Community doesn't want the world to read her novel "ER Confidential."

But whose secret has she uncovered? Surely not the two candy stripers who are trying to earn enough money to buy a beautiful prom dress by smuggling in fast food to the patients. Maybe it's the head of nursing, Nurse Rackett, who longs for the good old days when bedpans were...well, bedpans. Or could it be Dr. Nan Jeffries, longing to escape her mother's clutches and marry Orderly Dan. Could it be Orderly Dan, who once had a fling with Nurse Betty?

What about Will Bates, the multigazillionaire computer genius who's recovering upstairs and who mysteriously disappears. Could it be Dr. Kate Kildare, the forensic pathologist trying to baffle her colleagues with the perfect murder? And then there's Dr. Frank N. Stein, the head of psychiatry, who seems to need as much therapy as his patients. It could even be Dr. Stein's latest patient who thinks -- and acts and dresses -- like Marilyn Monroe.

Detective Sherman Holmes, on his first murder investigation, really walks into a hornet's nest when he steps into the ER, which is filled with just what the doctor ordered -
- plenty of action and lots of laughs!

ACT I
Scene 1

(AT RISE: In the Emergency Room reception area at County Community General Hospital at the beginning of an all-night shift. NURSE BETTY leans on the desk as DR. FRANK N. STEIN shows her his latest gadget, toilet seat with an electrical cord attached.)

BETTY: Gosh, Dr. Stein ... that's just amazing!

FRANK: Do you really think so?

ANNOUNCER:: Dr. Stein ... Dr. Frank N. Stein ... you're wanted in the psychiatric unit. Dr. Stein!

BETTY: I guess you gotta go.

FRANK: (To the PA.) Hold your horses, lady! (To BETTY.) It's a beauty, ha?

BETTY: Who wouldn't want a heated toilet seat? It sure would take the chill out of chilly mornings!

FRANK: It's got three temperature settings --

BETTY: I see that -- warm buns, baked buns, hot cross buns. Clever! I'd buy one in a second.

FRANK: You wanna buy this one?

BETTY: But, Doctor ... it's your only one ... the prototype. You need to save it for posterity. Some day they'll put it in a museum or something.

FRANK: You think so?

BETTY: It's what they do with all the world's great inventions.

FRANK: And then I'll be remembered for something important!

BETTY: But being a doctor is so noble, so ... unselfish and humanitarian.

FRANK: I'd rather be rich and famous like you know who in Room 48.

BETTY: Will Bates? The owner of Computers Galore? He's such a boring nerd!

(FIONA, SHANNON, and FRED enter left, dancing, wearing party hats, holding champagne bottles and glasses.)

(They slowly dance across the stage to exit right under next dialogue.)

BETTY: (Continued.) Excuse me, where are you going?

FIONA: To cheer up Mr. Bates!

SHANNON: He's in the hospital, you know!

BETTY: Excuse me, but we don't allow dancing in here ...

FRED: It's okay, if I put my back out, there are plenty of doctors around!

FIONA: Hey! Speaking of doctors, did you hear the one --

(As they exit, SHANNON and FRED roar as FIONA tells a joke.)

FRANK: Yeah ... he's a real boring guy.

BETTY: I'm sure you lead a very exciting life.

FRANK: Yeah ... I work all night here ... then go back to my basement apartment. I feed my parakeet Igor, work on my inventions ... heat up a Lean Cuisine meal for one ... go to sleep and show up here at six. I can hardly contain my excitement.

ANNOUNCER: Dr. Stein! To the psychiatric unit immediately!

FRANK: (To PA.) Just --

ANNOUNCER: And don't tell me to hold my horses! Move it!

(FRANK salutes PA and exits right. BETTY sits behind desk and begins to type on her computer.)

BETTY: Another unusual -- or shall I say sinister -- character at County Community General Hospital is Dr. Frank N. Stein, our head psychiatrist. By day, meek and mild-mannered. But by night, a mad scientist who experiments in his basement apartment with electricity ... chemicals ... and stolen body parts!

(KATE enters up right from office behind NURSE BETTY.)

Is There a Doctor in the House?

KATE: Betty?

(BETTY screams.)

KATE: Are you all right?

BETTY: Oh, sure! I was concentrating and you spooked me.

KATE: You've been awfully edgy lately ... something wrong?

BETTY: Well, to tell the truth ... an editor at Randomly House Publishers has been reading my manuscript.

KATE: That's wonderful!

BETTY: And I guess any minute now I'll find out if they accept it!

KATE: I guess then you'll quit and live the life of a glamorous author.

BETTY: Leave County Community General Hospital? Not on your life! This place is my ... inspiration!

KATE: What's your book about?

BETTY: Promise you won't tell?

KATE: Cross my heart.

BETTY: County Community General Hospital.

KATE: Really!

BETTY: You're in it! I call you ... Eunice Soldaire ... Medical Examiner.

KATE: Eunice?

BETTY: I had to disguise your name so you wouldn't sue me.

KATE: I'm too busy for that! Well, good luck to you.

BETTY: Thanks, Dr. Kildare.

KATE: Do you have the chart on the Mr. Bob?

BETTY: The poor man who the elephant stepped on? You don't expect foul play, do you?

KATE: Hardly ... what's all over the file?

BETTY: Gosh! Looks like peanut shells.

PATIENT ONE: Nurse! Nurse!
